When he looked up and spoke it was with a hint of a melancholy smile. "All the mystery and wisdom. There was a pause. He forgot that he had to answer in words. "I'd stay if I might," he said. "I'd stay here." What do I want? she asked herself, and the answer came not in words but throughout her whole body. "Well," Rose said, and dumped out the salt water on the bare dirt of the small front yard of her house, which, like most witches' houses, stood somewhat apart from the village. "Well," she said, straightening up and looking about vaguely as if for an answer, or a ewe, or a towel. "You have to know something about the power, see," she said at last, and looked at Dragonfly with one eye. Her other eye looked a little off to the side. Sometimes Dragonfly thought the cast was in Rose's left eye, sometimes it seemed to be in her right, but always one eye looked straight and the other watched something just out of sight, around the corner, elsewhere. gift. She and some men and women like her, people of no fame and some of questionable reputation, A carter walking at his mule's head with a load of oakwood came upon them and took them both to Woodedge. He could not make the young man let go of the dead woman. Weak and shaky as he was, he would not set his burden down on the load, but clambered into the cart holding her, and held her all the miles to Woodedge. All he said was "She saved me," and the carter asked no questions. Her eyes were shining and attentive. the bent grass to straighten it.
